

The CERES Habitat Construction Adventure Playground

Be part of the community design process and help us to create something wild! Workshop to be held at the CERES education centre:

Thursday 10 July 2008, 7.30-9.30pm.

About:

For 25 years, CERES has been a collaborative space for exploring creative dreams - from rejuvenating the landscape, to creating community garden spaces and developing amazing ideas with water, energy and soil. In this spirit, CERES is beginning a new design project to expand and re-develop its existing playground as a lush 'Habitat Construction Adventure Space'. We imagine creating a playground which will grow and evolve organically over years to come with a rich undergrowth of enticing forms and creative spaces. We want to hear more from the CERES community about your ideas!

What will the session involve?

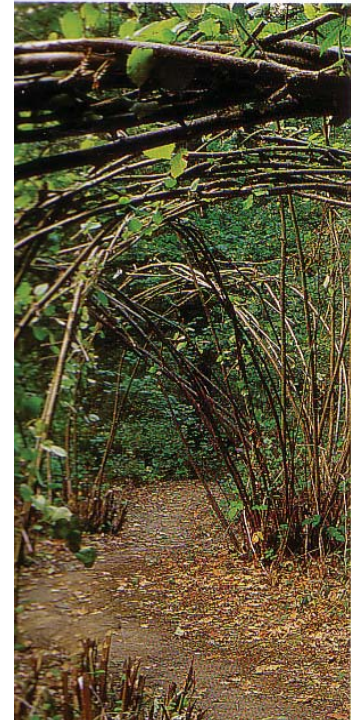

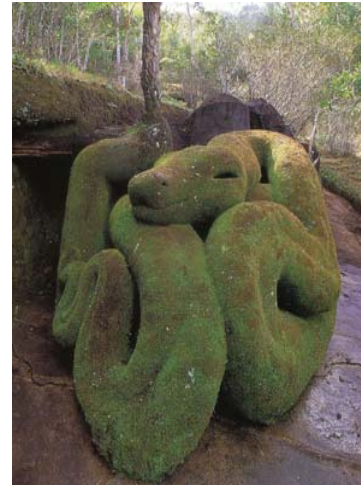

- *A presentation of the design brief, project parameters and a brainstorm session in the playground space with lots of ideas generation over morning tea!
- *Facilitated design and discussion sessions to collect ideas and build up a better picture of our target audience and the needs and desires of the community.
- *The opportunity to have continued involvement with the project as part of our advisory group.

Where?

The education centre, at CERES on the right when entering from Lee Street (will be well signposted). Please bring along images of other fantastic playgrounds that you love and inspiring images of natural habitats and wild spaces. to pin up.

Please RSVP to stephen@CERES.org.au or call 0402149814

Please note that this session is intended for adults but we hope to run a separate ideas session with kids at a later date.

Come and help us imagine.... climbing through burrows and along a spider's web?... or building tunnels inspired by giant ant hills and moving water through bamboo pipes? Wild human inventions meet the genius of animal habitats in an adventure play extravaganza!
